TERRIBLE WRECK

On L. and N. Near Louisville Monday Morning.

Nine People Killed and Many Injured.

Evening Post: The breaking of a flange on the wheel of a Louisville and Nashville passenger coach at Seventh and Hill streets at 7.56 o'clock this morning hurled eight people to instant and horrible death and left a score of others pinioned in the splintered debris of the train, mangled and bleeding.

At the end of its journey, and in sight of the depot, with the passengers preparing to start on the business of the day, a trivial accident to the train brought appalling disaster.

A moment after it had reached Seventh and Hill streets and was pulling into the yards of the Tenth street Depot, two of the coaches had been smashed into kindling and their passengers killed or mangled.

The loss of life is the greatest ever occurred in a railroad accident in Louisville.

The train was No. 24, fast mail, from Knoxville, due here at 8 o'clock. It consisted of the engine, combination baggage and postal car, a combination smoking and day coach, and two sleepers.

The two coaches were demolished, the rest of the train escaping.

Among the dead are William Pruitt, colored, Lebanon, Ky.; overseer of Ralley's farm, Josie Spies, New Haven.

Among the injured are Charles Speiss, New Haven, both legs fractured; amputation necessary. Murray Samuels, Lebanon Junction, hay and grain dealer; right leg broken and internal injuries. John Boon, of Lebanon, Ky., contusion of right leg.

The explanation of the wreck is as follows:

The train was on the inbound track and on the north side of the Hill street viaduct there is a switch which leads to the Quast hose factory, on Levering street. The locomotive and combination baggage and mail car passed this switch in safety. A flange on the forward truck of the smoker broke as it struck this switch, throwing the switch open. The rear trucks of the smoker ran in on the switch, followed by the ladies' coach and two sleepers. The smoking car did not break loose from the front of the train, and was dragged 200 feet along the tie, until the side of the car struck a string of freight cars at the north end of the switch. The front of the smoking car was uninjured, but for ten feet to the rear the entire right-hand side of the car was demolished and the roof torn off. The front end of the ladies' coach, which was vestibuled, was stove in for twenty feet, seats being torn up and all the windows smashed out. The hot water heater, which was in the forward end of this car, was torn loose from its fastening and hurled to the middle of the car, killing Mr. Coleman in its flight. The engine and baggage car were stopped twenty feet from the point of the crash, and less than two hours after the wreck occurred every trace of the disaster had been removed.

The Times and Post of Monday evening stated that Mr. John McChord, of Lebanon, was seriously injured, but it develops that he received only a few slight bruises.

BODY

Of James Canter, whose Death Occurred in the Philippines, Arrives in Springfield.

The remains of James Canter, who died in the Philippine Islands March 29, of malarial fever, arrived here last night, and will be interred in the Catholic cemetery at this place. Mr. Canter had served about four years in the United States Army, and was recognized by his superior officers as a brave soldier. The deceased was a son of Mrs. Kate Canter, who formerly resided here, but who now lives in Louisville, and was about twenty-five years old. The young man had many friends in Springfield who were grieved to learn of his death. Condolence is extended to the bereaved mother.

WATERY GRAVE

For Marion Lewis—Drowns in Chaplin River While Seining.

On last Friday night Marion Lewis was drowned in Chaplin river, just below Sutherland's mill, while in seining. It is supposed that young Lewis cramped, and being in deep water was unable to save himself. He is said to have been an expert swimmer. The other members of the seining party were Geo. Frather, Hart Edrington, Geo. Sutherland, Ben Waldrige and Charlie Jenkins. These men say that they heard Lewis' cries for help, but that they could not reach him without endangering their own lives, consequently, it is said, the boy sank almost within hand-grasping distance of five friends. His body remained in the river all night, but was recovered Saturday morning. Burial occurred Sunday at Rock Bridge. The unfortunate victim was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Lewis, and was about twenty years of age. He is said to have been an industrious young fellow. He possessed many friends who are sorely grieved over his untimely and tragic death.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS

From the Bearwallow Section. Mr. Fred Hill Improving.

Everything is right quiet at present and all the farmers are rejoicing over the nice shower we had lately—everything now in the fields looks promising and our country folks are all smiles—all for the better.

Mr. Jim Fields and family went down to Fredericktown to spend the day Sunday with Mrs. Tee Fields, who came all the way from Cincinnati to be with her father in his sickness. Mrs. Fields used to live on the Howard farm and years ago sold out and moved to Louisville and from there to Cincinnati where they have made quite a success. Mrs. Fields was accompanied by her charming daughter, Roxie, and intends to stay a few weeks with her parents.

Mr. Sam Anderson spent one night at Fredericktown nursing our sick friend, Mr. Fred Hill, and we were glad to learn from him that Mr. Hill was doing better and has a fair chance to get well and knock about yet.

Bro. Wittinghill, from Bardston, did some very able preaching at Hardin's Creek some time ago. He was accompanied by Bro. Wayne, also from Bardston, who preached a young man yet, promises to do great work in the Lord's vineyard.

Mr. Will Hill and Sam, his brother, both from Kansas, on a visit to their father, spent Wednesday with Mrs. Tine Cecil, their sister. Will and Sam looked well and are being very successful in Kansas.

A big gathering of the Hill family took place at S. R. Nally's last Thursday. Fred, Bert, Will and Sam Hill, Mrs. Nannie Clements, Mrs. Tine Cecil and family were highly entertained by Mrs. Nally.

We understand Brother Williams is to have another temperance lecture at Hardin's Creek soon. In his last lecture he invited all denominations to attend, and the same invitation is extended again; all Catholics and Protestants are welcome to hear the able speaker, and seats will be open to all.

Fonsie Wheeler called at his uncle's, Frank Keene, one day last week. Fonsie is a very energetic young man and is very successful.

All who know anything about saloons and whisky, or who have lived in towns where there were saloons, are in favor of local option. Experience is the best teacher. This local option question appears to our knowledge.

The body of an unknown man, who had committed suicide, was found near the Shelby county line in Oldham county yesterday. He had been dead for about ten days, and left a note saying ill health caused him to end his life.

A FEW WORDS ON LOCAL OPTION

From Our Gasburg and Blinco Correspondent.—Personal References and Other Items of Interest.

I went to Fredericktown one day last week—I think it was Saturday—and local option was in full force. Mr. Welsh's license ran out last Monday and could not have it renewed until today. I must say Fredericktown looked different to me to what it generally does on Saturday. And, although Mr. Welsh beats any saloon keeper that ever was there, I must say that more than ever I was in favor of local option after my visit there. In this neighborhood, Gasburg and Blinco, all are in favor of local option and it is bound to carry. We are all proud to see The Springfield Sun make such a noble fight for it. Mr. Gore has an ideal and he is not afraid to fight for it, no matter what it costs. He is a gentleman in every sense of the word, allowing every one his own honest opinion, but fighting hard for what he thinks is right.

All around here want local option. All denominations, catholic and protestant, see the good of it and it will carry surely if it depends on Mantion and Gasburg. Mantion never did believe in saloons, and when lately the question was raised of establishing one in the neighborhood it was dropped after some eloquent opposition by our preacher at Hardins and Father Pieters, of the Burg. We wish their voices were strong enough to close Greenbrier—but that will come later we hope.

Few people know where Gasburg is, and yet it is the home of some very good Washington and Marion counties' citizens, including my own. Gasburg is a little place on Hardin's Creek making the little between Washington and Marion on the road from Bear Wallow to Loretto. We do not know why it is called Gasburg, for we have never seen any gas or bushes in this neighborhood. Any way we are proud of it, for Gasburg is a quiet little place, free of saloons, free of noise, where people live happy and brotherly in the shadow of a

THE BLUE-GRASS TOURNAMENT.

Springfield Carries Off Seven Medals.—The Next Tournament Will Be Held In Springfield.

The Blue Grass Tournament has come and gone. Springfield's Graded School returns with its contestants wearing a goodly proportion of medals and deserving more that they were given. We had ten entries and brought back eight medals, three first and five second prizes.

The Tournament opened Thursday afternoon with a ball game between Springfield and Mt. Sterling. By the best playing seen in the Tournament Mt. Sterling defeated our team by a score of 4 to 1. Six innings of the game were played without either side scoring.

Thursday night at the Odd Fellows Temple the contests in Female Vocal Solo and Male Declaration were held. Springfield received second place in both, the second medals going to Miss Mary Haydon and Lyman Barber. Lexington received first in the Solo and Owenton in the Declaration.

Friday morning at the Graded School the scholastic contests occurred. Here we made very few entries but took two prizes out of our four entries. Lynne Bush won first place in Grammar and John S. McElroy second in English Literature.

Friday afternoon in the athletic events Frank McCabe won first in the fifty yard dash for boys under fifteen. John S. McElroy won second place in the hundred yard dash. His record was especially fine as he was set back twelve feet by the starter for false starts, and ended within arm's length of his opponent.

The longest of the program was held Friday night when the contests in female declamation, junior and senior, solo solo and amateur drama were held. Will Waters won first place in male solo with "Son of the Desert" and Miss Mary Haydon again received second place for her recitation, "The Rivals."

The contest closed Saturday morning small prayer house.

Dr. Wright, our able physician, is kept quite busy of late and is on the road often. He has been attending Mrs. Ed Miles, who is on the road to recovery at this writing.

Mrs. Ben Mattingly and two charming daughters, Teresa and Lilla, attended church services at Blinco last Sunday, where Father Pieters held his appointment and preached the word of God.

Mrs. J. L. Ball passed through our town enroute to Loretto with her daughter, Lillie. Mrs. Ball is the mother of a very creditable family.

Miss Smith and son, Tony, went to Chicago one day last week driving a stylish road coil. Mr. Smith is a very up-to-date horse trader knowing by every one in the horse business. He is also a very successful farmer and numbers his friends by his acquaintances.

Miss Alma Cambron, the bright young daughter of Lem Cambron, spent three days at home with her parents, and returned to Loretto Academy Sunday accompanied by her brother, John. Miss Blincoe and sister, Miss Lizzie, of Holy Cross, attended church at Blinco and spent Sunday evening with friends.

A large crowd from Gasburg and vicinity went to hear the preaching at Blinco church last Sunday.

Miss Effie Cambron went to Loretto Academy to see her sister, Prudie, who is studying at that place. Master Arch Cambron went with her. We were glad to hear that the young ladies in this vicinity studying there were in good health and doing fine.

Henry Mattingly, who recently built himself a new residence, may in the near future add some other new building to his property.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Young, married of late, went to Springfield one day last week. Mrs. Young, who formerly lived in Meade county, likes this neighborhood very much and prefers it to any other place she ever lived in.

with public oral spelling. One of the most remarkable contests in spelling ever seen in the state occurred between the representatives—all girls—of Pleasantville, Mt. Sterling and Lebanon. After an hours search through the book for difficult words, Prof. Bell, who was giving them out, gave up his effort to spell them down and gave three first place medals.

The delegation left in the afternoon and reached home after supper Saturday.

Our school feels proud that she received so many medals but everyone, both in our delegation and in fact most of the visitors at the Tournament feel greatly chagrined that we did not receive first place in three or four places where we got seconds. Especially was there disappointment in both of Miss Haydon's contests, as in the opinion, seemingly of everyone of the audience except the five men, whose opinion in the end counted, she undoubtedly deserved first place in both, being as the principal of several disinterested schools said "entirely out of her class."

Our delegates were royally entertained and all have tender spots in their hearts for the kind people who so generously and hospitably opened their homes to us.

The Sun has been informed that the next tournament will be held at Springfield.

ACQUITTED

Harrodsburg Policemen Acquitted of Murder Charge.

Harrodsburg, Ky., May 27.—The Anderson county jury called here to try William Britton and Luther Herron on the charge of murdering Walter Stotts took just fifteen minutes to return a verdict of not guilty. The jury retired to their room just as the clock struck 2, organized, and on the first ballot unanimously voted for a verdict of acquittal. They came back into the court room and reported their verdict so quickly that it could hardly be believed. The jury left on the 5 o'clock train this afternoon for their homes in and near Lawrenceburg. Britton and Herron were heartily congratulated upon their prompt vindication by their many friends.

Britton and Herron killed Walter Stotts and Sam C. Black in a pistol duel on the streets, growing out of their attempt as policemen to arrest Stotts. Britton was shot twice through the head, but recovered. They were tried for killing Black before a Mercer county jury, and were acquitted. Britton's brother was acquitted of a charge of murder in Illinois yesterday, having killed a man there who had gone out with him from this county.

EMPHATIC CHARGE

Delivered to the Grand Jury By Judge Thurman.

Circuit court convened Monday, Judge Thurman presiding. Monday's session was a short one, being taken up with the organization of the grand jury, the charge thereto and the assignment of the cases on the docket for trial. Judge Thurman's usual was very strong and emphatic in his charge to the grand jury and among the subjects touched upon were seining, carrying concealed deadly weapons, violation of the Sunday law, selling or furnishing liquor to minors and gambling.

The Judge pointed out that the above offenses were covered by statutes and that it was the duty of the grand jury, and that their oaths demanded, that they should probe these matters and if they found a guilty party to indict. This must be done regardless of their individual ideas of the righteousness of the law. Judge Thurman said in regard to gambling, that he understood a good deal of gambling was going on in Springfield. He said that generally the negro was indicted for crap shooting, while the "high roller" was unindicted. The Judge said if either must be spared let it be the negro with his five cent crap game and not the professional gambler or the aristocratic poker player. He also laid great stress upon the advantages of Sunday closing and upon the evils of pistol carrying and the resulting crime and sorrow from its practice. After the charge the jury retired to their room and organized for work.

The docket for the May and June term is light and the session will not be a long one. Commonwealth attorney Durham, accompanied by his junior, came in Monday.

AGREES NOT TO SELL

Liquor in Laurel County For Next Five Years.

London, Ky., May 25.—Robert Young, who operates a registered distillery at McWhorter, this county, and who was indicted in twenty cases at the last term of the Laurel Circuit Court for retailing liquor without license, pleaded guilty today and by agreement took a fine of $500, which he paid. He was required to execute bond not to sell any liquor in this county, which is local option, within the next five years.

Dear Editor Will You Please Publish as he often speaks of your town Claud his Best friend and Nurse

We are sorry, indeed, to learn that Mr. Gribbins met with such a serious "accident," but we most sincerely hope that he is not "painfully hurt." We are glad, however, that although he is unconscious, he was able to identify assassins. We are also glad that, even in his unconsciousness, he would like to hear from his friends here. We most profoundly hope that "his Best friend Nurse, Claud, of the horsepittle" will watch over him until he regains his conscience.

HANDSOME

Quarters Are Those of the Peoples Bank.

The Peoples Deposit Bank, after having been out of a home for some time, is now handsomely fitted up at the "same old stand."

The building has undergone a complete re-modeling, and it is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

The officers of the institution wish to call the attention of their friends, patrons and general public to the fact that they are now located in their new quarters at the old stand and cordially invite all to pay them a visit of inspection.

The old building has been enlarged, and, as stated above, remodelled, and the latest style fixtures installed throughout. In the building are private consultation and writing rooms for ladies and gentlemen. These rooms are excellently ventilated and lighted and equipped with every convenience and comfort.

This is one of the most completely equipped, as well as one of the most handsomely furnished, banks in the State, and is certainly a credit to the county.

The officials ask The Sun, on their behalf, to extend an invitation to you to bring your friends in at any time during banking hours to talk, write or rest.

TALKS ON COAL

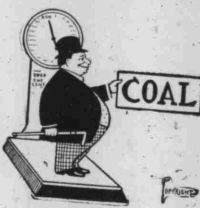

It's hard to burn
Bad Coal in the Summer.

"Split Your Coal Bill."

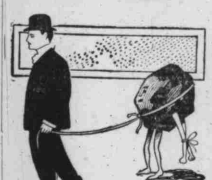

"Easy said, but how?" We sell coal and give coal advice. Advice is cheap but coal costs money. Why not then buy that superior quality we deal in? It goes farther, costs no more and heats better. If that isn't an inducement, there isn't any. We've told our story and up to you to buy coal of us and save money.

Full Weight

Is a mighty comforting thing to have when it's on something you have to buy the year round. "Solid men" like our "solid reputation," get coal of us every ton bargained for. Then again taking the high grade of our coal the year round, it's to your interest to buy here. Give us that next order and make sure you get the best.

We Will Capture Your Trade

If you give us but a single order. We speak from experience. There isn't one you can point to who buys coal from us but will recommend coal sold by us as being A1 in every respect. Never a complaint about quality, price or service. Fine record, isn't it? Add your name to the list and buy our coal hereafter.

"If you had been a millionaire could I have treated you more like a gentleman?" "No, you couldn't." "I do care, Jim." "There were tears in the eyes of the man now. MANAGEMENT OF CHICKENS

Prof. James Withycombe, Oregon Experiment Station, Tells How to Care for the Babies.

About 24 hours after the chickens are hatched they should be removed with the hen to a clean coop, one that has been thoroughly disinfected, so that every form of parasitic life is destroyed. They should be fed a small amount of hard boiled eggs for the first two days, then they may receive bread crumbs, or cracked wheat. Clean water should be supplied in a shallow vessel. It is a good plan to cover the floor of the coop with sand, by so doing they, in picking up their food, will get more or less sand, which will prove beneficial.

After the chicks are a week old they will enjoy a moderately soft mash of ground wheat, to which small amounts of sand and bone meal have been added. It is essential that they receive more of the mineral nutrients than exist in ordinary foods. The organic forms of phosphate as found in ground bones will prove more efficient than the rock phosphate. Experiments have demonstrated that it is not advisable to mix ground oyster shells with the food of young chicks, although it is a good plan to permit them to partake of it as they wish. Early hatched chicks will prove less troublesome to rear than late hatched. They escape in a measure the torments of parasites usually so common during the warm season, and the pullets will lay well in the fall, when eggs are a good price. Hens having free range and proper food will usually give much better results with their chickens than hens which are confined in yards.

Had a Close Call.

"A dangerous surgical operation, involving the removal of a malignant ulcer, as large as my hand, from my daughter's hip, was prevented by the application of Bucklen's Arnica Salve," says A. C. Stickel, of Milletus W. Va. "Persistent use of the Salve completely cured it." Cures Cuts, Burns and Injuries. 25c. at C. J. Haydon, druggist.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS

HON. BEN JOHNSON, OF BARDSTOWN,
NELSON COUNTY.

CIRCUIT COURT CLERK.

We are authorized to announce
ROBERT NOE

As a candidate for Circuit Clerk of Washington county, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

AND IT BEATS THE DEVIL!

These are days of reform!

Everywhere people are demanding that criminals, high and low, cease their operations; that they be apprehended and tried in the courts, of our country, and that justice be meted out to them in full measure. There is a sentiment spreading in every State in the Union against crime and vice of every nature, it matters not how "insignificant." Indeed, the day has dawned when the breakers of law and the defilers of righteousness—big and little—are being marched up to the "toll-line," and, sighing down the finger points of Mighty Justice, they behold the handwriting upon the wall, and the fortresses of these latter-day Belshazzars are crumbling like pillars of ashes. Let the good work go on; let all people—law-abiding people—it matters not of what walks of life, of what religious faith, or of what political belief, join hands and hearts in the crusade which is to be made against vice throughout the whole country.

Gov. Beckham is now receiving the plaudits of the people of Kentucky because of his efforts to "clean up" Louisville. Just over the river in the State of Indiana Gov. Hanly is endeavoring to put the lid on in every city in the State. Folk has "knocked the black out" in Missouri, and Weaver, Mayor of Philadelphia, has "kindled fires" under the nestings of thugs and thieves in that city, and scallawags throughout the whole State of Pennsylvania have felt the effects of his work.

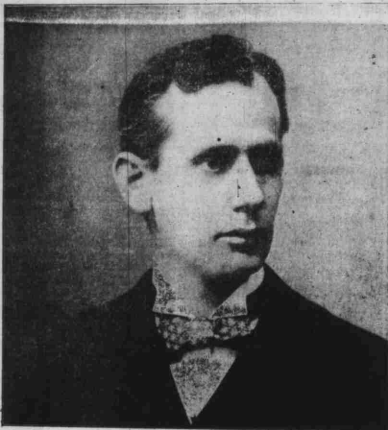

These reform movements are not due to the work of any political party; they are due to the determination of the people to pinion crime, to convict criminals and to build thrones upon which righteousness must reign. And people of all political parties are behind the servants in office demanding that they perform their duties well, and behind the people is that mighty power, the Consciousness of Right.

"Get thee behind me, Satan," the people are demanding, and his Satanic Majesty is skeedaddling.

And it beats the devil!

A Touching Incident.

I have read of a town meeting in Pennsylvania where the question of license was to be decided, writes a correspondent of the Herald and Presbyterian. As the question was about to be put, there arose from one corner of the room a miserable female, wrinkled and gaunt, and stretching out her arms, in a shrill voice she cried: "Look upon me. You all know me, or once did."

Hon. Ben Johnson, nominated for Congress Yesterday by the Fourth District Committee at Lebanon.

You all know I was once the mistress of the best farm in the township. You all know, too, I had one of the best—the most devoted of husbands. You all know I had five noble-hearted, industrious boys. Where are they now? Doctor, where are they now? You all know. You all know they lie in a row side by side, in yonder churchyard; all—everyone of them filling a drunkard's grave! They were all taught to believe that temperate drinking was safe—excess alone ought to be avoided; and they never acknowledged excess. But I saw the gradual change coming over my family and prospects with dismay and horror. I felt we were all to be overwhelmed in one common ruin. I tried, to ward off the blow, I tried to break the spell—the delusive spell—in which the idea of the benefits of temperate drinking had involved husband and sons. I begged, I prayed; but the odds were against me." And with her arms flung high and her tall form stretched to its utmost, and her voice raised to an unearthly pitch, she exclaimed: "I shall soon stand before the judgment seat of God—I shall meet you there, you false guides, and be a witness against you all!"

She spoke and finished. But when the chairman put the question, "shall any license be granted for the sale of spirituous liquors?" the response was unanimous—"No!"—The Messenger.

Convicted Man Collapses.

Harrodsburg, Ky., May 25.—Abe Denny, who was given a life sentence Monday for killing R. K. Scott, collapsed after the trial and is thought to be gradually dying from the shock and nervous prostration. He does not eat, pays no heed to what goes on about him, and will not talk even to his wife. Denny's lawyers made a hard fight today for a new trial on the ground that the Sheriff took the jury to High Bridge and over into Jessamine county and allowed them to attend a dance Sunday. Judge Bell has the motion under submission.

Gus G. Coulter, formerly State Auditor and one of the best-known men in the State, died yesterday at his home in Mayfield after an illness of only two weeks.

Twenty Reasons Why You Should Oppose the Saloon.

EXCERPTS

1. It never builds up manhood but tears it down.
2. It never beautifies the home, but often wrecks it.
3. It never increases one's usefulness, but lessens it.
4. It never allays the passions, but inflames them.
5. It never stills the tongue of slander, but loosens it.
6. It never promotes purity of thought, but poisons it.
7. It never empties almshouses and prisons, but fills them.
8. It never protects the ballot-box, but defiles it.
9. It never makes happy families, but miserable ones.
10. It never prepares one for heaven, but for hell.
11. It never prompts to right doing in anything, but to wrong.
12. It never diminishes taxes (with all its revenue), but increases them.
13. It never renders the Sabbath quiet, but desecrates it.
14. It never protects our property or personal safety, but endangers them.
15. It never helps one to get a good insurance policy on his life, but militates against it.
16. It never creates ambition and thrift, but invites laziness, profligacy, poverty, idleness and crime.
17. It never builds up the church, but poisons the station house, prisons and chain-gangs.
18. It never refines character nor promotes Christian grace, but is a destroyer of the soul.
19. It never teaches honesty and uprightness, but incites the incendiary to apply the midnight torch.
20. It never protects a man, but robs him of his money, his family happiness, his good name, his hopes and all endearments of life.

MOTHERS.

EDITOR SUN:

Dr. Bush, a writer, said long ago that mothers planted the seed of nearly all the good and evil in this world. Mothers, let us strive to plant seed for good.

Judge Thurman, in one of his addresses said that he would not be following his mother's teachings if he did not fight against whiskey.

Oh! for more noble Christian mothers! Mothers, do you realize that God has given you, your children to mould their character, and lives in such manner as to be a blessing to you, a blessing to themselves and their country?

Mothers of this county, let us help rid our county of this dreadful and destructive power that is taking our fathers, our husbands, and our children to ruin. Let us give of our means, our prayers, our efforts, our voices, and all the forces we can muster to help in the battle against this evil. Happy is she who has right views of her weighty responsibilities; but thrice happy is she who not only understands her duty, but does it.

A MOTHER.

Does Prohibition Prohibit?

If more whiskey is sold where there are no saloons than where there are, would brewers, distillers and wholesale dealers, who own about 75 per cent. of all saloons, pay license, rent, taxes, insurance, attorney's fees and contribute large sums of money to influence the press, to publish and distribute literature and in other ways to obtain license, all to lessen the amount of their sales? Would the liquor men now be maintaining five national organizations at heavy expense to oppose all prohibitory measures if such measures did not interfere with the traffic? Would they keep an expensive lobby at the national capital to urge the restoration of the canton or army saloon and to prevent a prohibitory clause in the statehood bill for Oklahoma and Indian Territory if they were not financially interested?—Charles Scanlon.

Of Interest to Rural Route People

The following order which is of interest to people who reside on rural routes has been received by Postmaster Waters.

On and after July 1, 1906, patrons of the rural delivery service will be required to display signals on their boxes when they leave mail in them for carriers to collect as, after that date, carriers, when serving their routes, will not be required to open and examine any mail boxes except those to which they have mail to deliver and those on which signals are displayed to indicate there is mail for carriers to collect.

Those patrons whose boxes are not provided with signals must attach thereto some device which, when displayed, will show passing carriers there is mail to be collected. It is not necessary that the device shall be either costly or complicated; a very simple arrangement will answer the purpose.

Carriers must lower the signals on boxes after making collections, provided no mail is left therein; and must display the signals when they deposit mail for patrons, unless the patrons have made request to the contrary.

Not if as Rich as Rockefeller.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and Diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never fails, and when reduced with water is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by every reliable dealer in the Blue Gauss.

Temperance Fight on in Henry County.

New Castle, Ky., May 25.—The temperance forces of Henry county organized here to conduct a vigorous campaign to vote whisky out of the county. Ex-Circuit Clerk S. J. Douthitt was elected County Chairman, and a County Committee has been selected—one from each precinct. Liquor is now sold in only one town, New Castle, and it is thought that this vote will take it out of that place.

RIDS WANTED.—We are now ready to receive bids for building turnpike from the Springfield and Perryville pike to Marion county line—about 2 1/2 miles. Persons desiring to make bids will correspond with J. W. Gordon, Springfield, Ky., Route 4, or Clarence Christie, Lebanon, Ky.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church has been postponed and will commence on Sunday, July 1, instead of June 17, as previously announced. Dr. W. O. Carver, pastor of the New Salem Baptist church, will assist the pastor.

S. M. Campbell reports county court day sales as reasonably good. About 100 cattle on the market selling anywhere from 2 1/2 to 4 cents per pound, milk cows from $15 to $35, several horses at from $15 to $125 changed hands.

Mrs. Hadgie Mahon died at her home at Lebanon yesterday morning of a complication of diseases and after funeral services at the Presbyterian church this afternoon the body was interred in the Lebanon cemetery. Mrs. Mahon was well-known in Springfield where she has quite a number of relatives, being closely related to the McElroy family of this place. The deceased was a devout Christian and was loved by a large circle of friends. Messrs. A. C. McElroy, W. T. McElroy and wife, J. R. Wharton and wife and Miss Bettie Irvin, of this place, attended the funeral.

WILLISBURG.

There was a large crowd out to the decoration. Hon. Sam Black's grave was beautifully decorated with pink peonies and ferns by Miss Ora Adams, the public school superintendent, of Mercer county.

Edgar Riley died at the home of his father, near Mackville, last Saturday morning, May 26, and was buried at this place Sunday morning. The community extends sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Misses Alice and Raymie Franklin spent a few days last week with Miss Myrtle Sutherland at this place. Miss John Reynolds was in Springfield one day last week shopping.

U. G. Scroggman and son, Raymond, spent Sunday with W. B. Shirley.

Worley Royalty, of Salvisa, Ky., visited at the home of J. W. Shirley last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Ben McElroy visited her mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary McElroy, last Thursday.

Charlie Blanton visited at the home of W. S. Gibbs several days last week.

Marion County.

Falcon: Mr. Leo Beaver one of the best known men of the county, died at his home in St. Marys, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, of asthma and a complication of other troubles incident to old age. He was 82 years old and was an active man in business affairs in the county for many years.

The bane of matrimony will be announced at St. Charles Catholic church for the first time Sunday between Prof. Edward G. Douds and Miss Teresa A. Smith.

Mr. Philis Watson, age 25 years, died of consumption at his home in this city Friday.

Sheriff Gartin, Jailer Madden, and Chief Thompson went to Frankfort yesterday to carry the five prisoners who were convicted during Circuit Court.

Mrs. Myrtle Cornelison, age 22 years, died at her home near Bradfordsville yesterday morning. She is survived by her husband to whom she was married about one year ago.

NOTICE.

Tax-payers will take notice that all city taxes are now due and payable to the City Treasurer. Under the present mode of collecting taxes due the city and the collector will not call upon you and solicit payment as heretofore, but it is the duty of each individual tax payer to settle with the City Treasurer, Mr. L. B. Cain, at the First National Bank. After July 1st a penalty of 2 per cent. will be added to all taxes unpaid at that time, and after September 1st and November 1st each, additional penalties of 2 per cent. will be added and tax warrants will issue for summary collection.

Licenses taxes are now past due, and it would be well for all persons who are conducting any business for which a license tax is imposed to bear in mind that if they have not secured such license during the year 1906, they are liable to a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $25, and each day such business is continued without license constitutes a separate offense.

Dog Tax.—It is the duty of all persons having a dog to take out license therefor, and it is unlawful for a dog to be permitted to run at large without having on its neck a collar to which should be attached the check issued with the license, and the penalty for failure to do so is not only that the dog shall be impounded, but also that the owner or keeper thereof is liable to a fine.

Copies of the City Ordinances can be secured from the office of The Springfield Sun free of charge. Ignorance of law is no excuse, and will not be a good defense to an action against persons who have rendered themselves liable by failing to comply with the law. Heretofore the city authorities had not deemed it proper to have the laws strictly enforced until the people could have an opportunity to know of them, but notice is hereby given that hereafter the laws must be rigidly enforced.

After 10 days from the publication of this notice all persons who have not taken out license as required by law will be prosecuted and the penalty imposed for doing business without license.

By order of the City Council.
JOHN W. LEWIS, Mayor.
Attest: C. M. McCHOIR, City Clerk.

MT. ZION.

A good rain fell here last Thursday week which was much needed. But it is feared by some that it came too late to be of much benefit to the wheat crop. Then again on last Saturday and Sunday a nice rain fell and farmers are busy setting tobacco.

Miss Claudia Neale has returned home from a pleasant visit in Maud.

Several from here attended court at Springfield Monday.

Miss Nona Bonta, and Misses Jennie Cokendolpher and Gertha Bush, of Chaplin, passed through here enroute to Springfield Monday.

Rev. Edwin Hobbs, of Louisville, who has been conducting a series of meetings at Sunny Heights school house and other points, filled the pulpit here Sunday in place of our pastor, Rev. W. S. Maxwell, who is at the bedside of his little son.

Mr. Hiner Neale is attending court in Springfield this week.

Miss Blanch Bonta was in Bloomfield shopping one day last week.

Miss Gertrude Sutherland is visiting relatives in Willisburg this week.

Miss Carrie Russell, who has been visiting relatives at Varnsdall and Harrodsburg, returned home last week.

Our community was very much shocked last Saturday morning over the untimely death of Marion Lewis, son of Tyler Lewis, of Rockbridge, while fishing in the Chaplin river with several others, the young man was drowned.

MOORESVILLE.

Quite a number from here attended county court last Monday.

We had a good rain here Saturday and Sunday.

Local option is all the talk. We believe our county will go dry.

Several from here attended the decoration at Willisburg last Saturday.

We are glad to report Miss Etta Mattingly as convalescent, after a long and severe attack of typhoid fever.

Mr. Ed Moore will finish his sawing this week. He will then attend to his crop for a month or two.

Owen Ellis spent Saturday and Sunday at Woodlawn.

Ben Reddick, of Maud, spent Sunday with John Ellis.

Mrs. Sallie Bodine and family, of Maud, spent last Sunday at the home of Mr. J. T. Settles.

Mr. Wash Tucker and family, Mr. Palmer Goatley and family, and several others dined with Mr. T. J. Settles last Thursday.

Born, on May 25th, to the wife of Murray Shields, twins, a boy and a girl. The tobacco men and farmers are wearing smiles on their faces owing to the recent rains, as it is better to be a little wet than so dry.

CHAPTER XV.

A FEW hours later all was dark and silent within the castle. On the stone walls below the steady tread of sentinels rose on the still air. In the hallways the trusted guardsmen glided about like specters or stolid statues. An hour before the great edifice had been bright and full of animation. Now it slumbered.

It was 2 o'clock. The breath of roses scented the air; the gurgle of fountains was the only music that touched the ear. Beverly Calhoun, dismounting Aunt Fanny, stepped from her window out upon the great stone balcony. A rich oriental dressing gown, loose and comfortable, was her costume. Something told her that sleep would be a long time coming, and an hour in the warm, delightful atmosphere of the night was more attractive than the cool, sleepless silence of her own room. Every window along the balcony was dark, proving that the entire household had retired to rest.

She was troubled. The fear had entered her head that the castle folk were regretting the escape of Baldos, that every one was questioning the wisdom of his being in the position he occupied through her device. Her talk with him did much to upset her tranquillity. That he knew so much of the fortress bore out the subtle suspicions of Dargulion, and perhaps others. She was troubled, not that she doubted him, but that if anything went wrong an accusation against him, however unjust, would be difficult to overcome. And she would be to blame in a large degree.

For many minutes she sat in the dark shadow of a great pillar, her eyes upon the cool balustrade, staring dreamily into the star studded vault above. Far away in the air she could see the tiny yellow lights of the monastery, lonely sentinel on the mountain top. From the heights near that shade of peace and penitence an enemy could destroy the fortress to the south. Had not Baldos told her so? One big gun would do the work if it could be taken to that altitude. Baldos could draw a perfect map of the fortress. He could tell precisely where the shells should fall. And already her chief men in Edelweiss were wondering who he was and to what end he might utilize his knowledge. They were watching him; they were warning her.

For the first time since she came to the castle she felt a sense of loneliness, a certain unhappiness. She could not shake off the feeling that she was, after all, alone in her belief in Baldos. Her heart told her that the tall, straightforward figure had not in the hills was as honest as the day. She was deceiving him, she realized, but he was misleading no one. Off in a distant part of the castle grounds she could see the long square shadow that marked the location of the barracks and mess room. There he was sleeping, confidently relying on her and her power to save him from all harm. Something in her soul cried out to him that she might be staunch and true and that he might sleep without a tremor of apprehensiveness.

Suddenly she smiled nervously and drew back into the shadow of the pillar. It occurred to her that she might be looking across the moonlit park, looking directly at her through all that shadowy distance. She was conscious of a strange glow in her cheeks and a quickening of the blood as she pulled the folds of her gown across her bare throat.

"Not the moon, nor the stars, nor the light in St. Valentine's, but the black thing away off there on the earth," said a soft voice behind her, and Beverly started as if the supernatural had approached her. She turned to face the princess, who stood almost at her side.

"Yvette: How did you get here?" "That is what you are looking at, dear," went on Yvette as if completing her charge. "Why are you not in bed?" "And you? I thought you were sound asleep long ago," murmured Beverly, abominating the guilty feeling that came over her. "I am not asleep," said Yvette, drawing her arm about Beverly's shoulder.

"I have been watching you for half an hour," she said gently. "I sit out like the moon and stars as well as you. Isn't it my grim old castle? Let us sit here together, dear, and dream awhile."

"You dear Yvette," and Beverly drew her down beside her on the cushions. "But listen. I want you to get something out of your head. I was not looking at anything in particular."

"Beverly, I believe you were thinking of Baldos," said Yvette, her fingers straying fondly across the girl's soft hair.

"I believe you were thinking of Baldos for the first time since he was sold out of her thoughts. The realization came like a blow, and her eyes grew very wide out there in the darkness."

"And you are so suspicious on his account. I know it, dear. You are."

"Well, Yvette, why shouldn't I be worried? I brought him here against his will, protesting that if anything should happen to him—she shuddered involuntarily."

"Don't be afraid, Beverly. I have as much confidence in him as you have."

His eyes are true. Graustark believes in him, too, and so does Mr. Anghish. Gren says he would swear by him, no matter who he is."

"But the others?" Beverly whispered.

"Baron Dargulion is his friend and so is Quinton. They know a man. The count is different."

"I loathe that old wretch!" "Hush! He has not wronged you in any way."

"But he has been unfair and mean to Baldos."

"It is a soldier's lot, my dear."

"To this count he would be an honorable soldier, and we have nothing to fear in him. Neither of them is our enemy. It is the possibility that he is not one of the caste that makes his presence here look dangerous."

"I don't want to talk about him," said Beverly, but she was disappointed when the princess obligingly changed the subject.

Baldos was not surprised, scarcely more than interested, when a day or two later he was summoned to appear before the board of strategy. If any one had told him, however, that on a recent night a pair of dreamy gray eyes had tried to find his window in the great black shadow he might have jumped in amazement and delight. For at that very hour he was looking off toward the castle, and his thoughts of the girl who drew back into the shadow of the pillar.

The Graustark ministry had received news from the southern frontier. Messengers came in with the alarming and significant report that Dargulion was strengthening his fortifications in the passes and moving war supplies northward. It meant that Gabriel and his people expected a fight and were preparing for it. Count Halford had called the ministers together, and Lorry and the princess took part in their deliberations. General Marxus represented the army, and it was his opinion that the castle should be defended by the army and his thoughts of the girl who drew back into the shadow of the pillar.

The Iron Count plainly intimated that the new guard was in a position to transmit valuable information to the enemy. Colonel Quinox sent for him, and Baldos was soon standing in the presence of Yvette and her advisers.

He looked about him with a singular smile. The one whom he was supposed to regard as the princess was not in the council chamber. Lorry opened the examination at the request of Count Halford, the premier. Baldos quietly answered the questions concerning his present position, his age, his training, his enlistment and his interpretations of the obligations required of him.

"Ask him who he really is," suggested the Iron Count saturnally.

"We can expect but one answer to that question," said Lorry, "and that is the one which he chooses to give."

"My name is Baldos—Paul Baldos," said the guard, but he said it in such a way that no one could mistake his appreciation of the fact that he could give one name as another and still serve his own purposes.

"That is like number one," observed the Iron Count saturnally.

Marxus loudly. Every eye was turned upon Baldos, but his face was not in his half mocking expression of serenity.

"I am."

"Proceed with the examination, Mr. Lorry," said Count Halford, interpreting a quick glance from Yvette.

"Are you willing to answer any and all questions we may ask in connection with your observations since you became a member of the castle guard?" asked Lorry.

"Did you take special care to study the interior of the fortress when you were there several days ago?"

"Have you discussed your observations with any one since that time?" "I have."

"With whom?" "With her highness the princess," said Baldos without a quiver. There was a moment's silence, and furtive looks were cast in the direction of Yvette, whose face was a study. Almost instantaneously the entire body of his listeners understood that he referred to Beverly Calhoun. Baldos felt that he had been summoned before the board at the instigation of his fair protector.

"And your impressions have gone no farther?"

"They have not, sir. It is most confidential."

"Could you accurately reproduce the plans of the fortress?"

"I think so. It would be very simple."

"Have you studied engineering?" "Yes."

"And you could scientifically enumerate the defects in the construction of the fort?"

"It would not be very difficult, sir."

"It has come to our ears that you consider the fortress weak in several particulars. Have you so stated at any time?"

"I told the princess that the fortress is deplorably weak. In fact, I think I mentioned that it could be taken with ease." He was not looking at Count Marxus, but he knew that the old man's eyes were flaming. Then he proceeded to tell the board how he could overcome the fortress, elaborating on his remarks to Beverly. The ministers listened in wonder to the words of this calm, indifferent young man.

"Will you oblige us by making a rough draft of the fort's interior?" asked Lorry after a solemn pause. Baldos took the paper and with the quick time drew the exact lay of the fortress. The sketch went the rounds and apprehensive looks were exchanged by the ministers.

"It is accurate," by Jore," exclaimed Lorry. "I doubt if a dweller in the fort could do better. You must have been very observant."

"And very much interested," snarled Marxus.

"Only so far as I imagined my observations might be of benefit to some one else," said Baldos coolly. Again his looks were like death.

"Do you know what you are saying, Baldos?" asked Lorry after a moment.

"Certainly, Mr. Lorry. It is the duty of any servant of her highness to give her all that he has in him. If my observations can be of help to her I feel in duty bound to make the best of them for her sake, not for my own."

"Perhaps you can suggest modifications in the fort," snarled Marxus. "Why don't you do it, sir, and let me have the benefit of your superior intelligence? No, gentlemen, all this prating of loyalty need not deceive us," he cried, springing to his feet. "The fellow is nothing more nor less than an infernal spy, and the Tower is the place for him! He can do no harm there."

"If it were my intention to do harm, gentlemen, do you imagine that I should withhold my information for days?" asked Baldos. "If I am a spy you may rest assured that Count Marxus's kindness should not have been so long disregarded. A cry does not believe in delays."

"My spy kindnesses?" cried Marxus. "What do you mean, sir?"

"I mean this, Count Marxus," said Baldos, looking steadily into the eyes of the head of the army. "It was kind and considerate of you to admit me to the fortress, no matter in what capacity, especially at a critical time like this. You did not know me, you had no way of telling whether my intentions were honest or otherwise, and yet I was permitted to go through the fort from end to end. No spy could wish for greater generosity than that."

An almost imperceptible smile went around the face of the general, but one breathed more freely for the candor and boldness of the guard won the respect and confidence of all except Marxus. The Iron Count was white with anger. He took the examination of Lorry's hands and piled the stranger with insulting questions, each calm answer king him more furious than before. At last, in sheer impotence, he relapsed into silence, waving his hand to Lorry to indicate that he might resume.

"You will understand, Baldos, that we have some cause for apprehension," said Lorry, immensely gratified by the outcome of the tit. "You are a stranger, and, whether you admit it or not, there is reason to believe that you are not what you represent yourself to be."

"I am a humble guard at present, sir, and a loyal one. My life is yours to command."

Yvette whispered something in Lorry's ear at this juncture. She was visibly pleased and excited. He looked doubtful for an instant and then appeared followed her suggestion, regardless of consequences.

"Would you be willing to utilize your knowledge as an engineer by suggesting means to strengthen the fortress?" The others stared in fresh amazement. Marxus went as white as death.

"Never," he blurted out hoarsely.

"I wish anything the least that commands me to do," said Baldos easily.

"You mean that you serve her only?" "I serve her first, sir. If she were here I could command me to die, and there would be an end to Baldos." And he smiled as he said it. The old prince looked at him with a new, eager expression, as if something had just become clear to her. There was a chorus of coughs and a round of stylings.

"She could hardly ask you to die," said Yvette, addressing him for the first time.

"A princess is like April weather, madam," said Baldos, with rare humor, and the laugh was general. Yvette resolved to talk privately with this excellent wit before the hour was over. She was confident that he knew her to be the princess.

"I would like to ask the fellow an other question," said Marxus, flinging his sword belt nervously. "You say you serve the princess. Do you mean by that that you imagine your duties as a soldier to compel you to stand attendance within the security of these walls?"

"I believe I enlisted as a member of the castle guard, sir. The duty of the guard is to protect the person of the ruler of Graustark and to do that to the death."

"It is my belief that you are a spy. You can show evidence of good faith by enlisting to fight against Dargulion and by shooting to kill," said the count, with a sinister gleam in his eye.

"And if I decline to serve in any other capacity than the one I now?" "Then I shall brand you as a spy and a coward."

"You have already called me a spy, your excellency. It will not make it any less true if you add, if you can, that I refuse to take up arms against either Dargulion or Asphian."

The remark created a profound sensation. In fact, I think I mentioned that it could be taken with Two Deaths.

Saturday morning, May 26, news came to our home that Edgar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Riley, had passed from this earthly region to that Celestial City. He was about twenty years of age and had been a sufferer of that dreaded disease, consumption, for one year. He was a member of the Rock-bridge Baptist church and was a bright, noble boy. His career was short here, but was full of good deeds. He had a sunny, cheerful disposition, and, being aware of his condition, was fully prepared for a brighter home than this. His remains were taken to Willsburg, Sunday morning and despite the gloomy day the church was crowded with a large concourse of friends who had met to pay the last tribute of respect to this young man with whom so many had been associated. He will be missed as a companion in the society circles of the young. Rev. Simms gave a short discourse, after which the body was buried in the cemetery at Willsburg. The fond and loving parents have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

While we are writing this tribute to our friend, the sad intelligence of the tragic death of another of our friends is brought to us, Marion, son of Tyler Lewis, was drowned while swimming near Sutherland's mill. Having a tender feeling for this boy I deem it my duty to write a few lines on his death. Both of these young men were pupils of the writer, and, having been thrown in association with them, fully realize that they both had bright futures before them, and with a sad heart I pen these words to the parents of two such noble boys. We trust that these lessons of bereavement will draw them nearer to their Master and that they will prepare themselves to meet their children in that glorious Beyond, where there will be no pain nor sorrow is the prayer of the writer.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey, of 3222 Clinton St., Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. Mr. Massey relates his experience for the benefit of others who may be similarly afflicted. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by every reliable dealer in the Blue Grass.

Wire Holds Heart in Place.
Columbus, O.—Louis Thyrum left Mount Carmel hospital the other day with 17 feet of silver wire in his body. He entered the hospital in such a condition that it was thought he would never leave it alive. He was injured in a street car accident in Chicago and was "twisted up" internally. Dr. G. S. Hamilton took the case in hand and several weeks ago performed a most remarkable operation. Thyrum had a lung and his heart displaced by being hit by the car, and was not expected to live.

Want Canteen Abolished in Japan.
Marshall Oyama has been petitioned by Hon. Taro Ando to adopt the American system and abolish the canteen in the Japanese army. It appears that the regulations of the sale of liquor to Japanese soldiers is not sufficiently strict to do away with the many grave evils naturally growing out of such sale.

Made Happy for Life.

Great happiness came into the home of S. C. Blair, school superintendent, at St. Albans, W. Va., when his little daughter, was restored from the dreadful complaint he names. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' Dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until at a last resort we tried Electric Bitters; and I rejoice to say, three bottles effected a complete cure." "Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weaknesses, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by C. J. Haydon's drug store. Price 50c.

Bad Management.

Dosing fowls for disease cannot replace maintenance of health. It is a silent indication of erroneous management. This corrected dispenses with a drug bill.

A Year of Blood.

The year 1903 will long be remembered in the home of F. N. Tackett, of Alliance, Ky., as a year of blood; which was so copiously from Mr. Tackett's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: "Severe bleeding from the lungs and a frightful cough had brought me at death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, with the astonishing result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and as time has proved, permanently cured." Guaranteed for Sore Throats, Coughs and Colds, at C. J. Haydon's drug store. Price 50c, and $1 Trial bottle free.

Nervous Worn-Out

If you are in this condition, your nerve force is weak—the power is giving out, the organs of your body have "slowed up," and do their work imperfectly. This failure to do the work required, clogs the system and brings distress and disease. When the nerves are weak the heart is unable to force the life-giving blood through your veins; the stomach fails to digest food; the kidneys lack power to filter impurities from the blood, and the poisonous waste remains in the system to breed disease. Nerve energy must be restored. Dr. Miles' Nerve will do it, because it strengthens the nerves; it is a nerve medicine and tonic, that rebuilds the entire nervous system.

"Several years ago I was all broken down. I was nervous, worn-out, could not sleep, was in constant pain. I doctored for months, and finally the doctor said he could do nothing for me. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nerve, and, after using eight bottles, and I became strong and healthy, and now live, altogether, 100 years."—H. C. CUNNINGHAM, 108 Elmwood Ave., Altoona, Pa.

Dr. Miles' Nerve is sold by your druggist, or you may order it by mail. The first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.
